

EGR DECOR

A modern kitchen interior featuring a curved island with a white countertop and a dark wood-grain base. The island has a built-in sink and a chrome faucet. The background shows a kitchen with dark wood-grain cabinets, a stainless steel range hood, and a dark countertop. The floor is dark and reflective. The lighting is warm and focused on the island and the background kitchen area.

“People are increasingly seeking connections from nature. It creates a welcoming and calming environment, and is a timeless, versatile material we love. We see a growing desire for lighter, airier spaces, and wood is a wonderful material to incorporate to achieve this.”

Chris von Eckartsberg and Hans Baldauf, Interior Designers
(bcvarch.com)

“Tall backsplashes clad with heavily veined marble such as Arabascatto or Calacatta Oro will be making waves in high-brow design circles.”

“In 2019, kitchens will be a mix of classic and modern. People want modern amenities and integrated looks, but they don’t want their kitchens to look space aged. It’s the heart of the home and they want their kitchens to feel warm, welcoming, and attractive.”

Young Huh, Interior Designer
(younghuh.com)

“Matte black will continue to be a predominant finish for kitchen fixtures, hardware accents, and even millwork profile details. Black feels fresh as a crisp accent color in light-colored kitchens, and black finishes are a way to add some drama without fully darkening your kitchen. On the flip side, lighting will be distinguished by lively jewel-toned colors that bring an intimate living room quality to the otherwise utilitarian kitchen.”

Carolyn Pressly, Interior Designer
